As in Chanda's Secrets (2004) and Chanda's Wars (2008), Stratton explodes with political relevance, this time exploring dangers that are more familiar to American readers—or should be. Fifteen-year-old Sami, a Muslim, lives in a white suburb outside Rochester, N.Y. Schoolmates call him "sand monkey" and bully him.

Borderline Allan Stratton Review by Dean Schneider. March 2010. Living in upstate New York with a name like Mohammed Sami Sabiri, Sami has always felt like an outsider—the school nerd, a member of his school's "leper colony" and the subject of constant taunting. His father fled Iran as a young man because of the secret police and has ...
